

Python Programming

Python is a high-level programming language widely used for automation, data analysis, and machine learning.

Variables store values such as numbers, strings, and lists.

Functions group reusable instructions and can accept parameters and return values.

Lists are ordered collections that can contain multiple values.

Dictionaries store information as key-value pairs.